

From: Paul Strauss
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/16/01 10:45am
Subject: Microsoft did nothing wrong!

Yes Microsoft flexed its muscle and made competitors play according to their rules but that is only because everybody wanted to be associated with what THEY created! You should not be penalizing a company because it was ultimately successful unless you publish guidelines that tell other up and coming companies that you are doing great and achieving the American dream as long as you do get to ?XXX? level of success.

At the very least, it is unconceivable that you would limit what the company can put into its own product. Can?t you see how asinine that is telling a company what it can and cannot produce?

Sincerely,
Paul Strauss
Strauss31@home.com